The Slab Selection Guide

How to choose your slab and see it in full before it is cut, step by step.

WHY IT MATTERS

No two slabs are the same

Natural stone is one of a kind. The exact piece you choose is the single biggest factor in how your kitchen looks and what it costs.

That is why picking your slab in person beats ordering from a photo or a small sample. You get to see the real color, the movement, and the finish before anything is cut.

THE ENCHANTED WAY

The slab you fall in love with is the exact one we tag and install. No swaps, no surprises.

What to look for

See the whole slab

A sample hides the real pattern. View the full slab, since the movement changes from end to end.

Check it in natural light

Color shifts under different lighting. Look near daylight so it is true to home.

Read the movement

Decide where the boldest veining should land, like the center of your island.

Match your kitchen

Bring a cabinet door or floor sample. Undertones matter as much as the color.

Ask about the finish

Polished, honed, or leathered changes the look and the upkeep. Pick what fits your style.
